Explore Rome, Italy

Rome, Italy, seems to have its own gravitational pull, attracting not only millions of tourists each year, but also the most creative artists and thinkers of every era. All that surrounds a visitor in Rome—the stunning art and architecture, the terrible traffic, the grandeur of scale and the lively (almost hyper-animated) citizens—guarantees an unforgettable trip.

Known as "The Eternal City," Rome is a supreme palimpsest. The ruins of pagan temples have become the foundations of Christian churches, ancient theaters have been made into medieval family fortresses, and Corinthian columns support new walls. The ages are layered, one atop the other, but the flow of Roman life is ever forward, with a respect for its glorious past. Rome wasn't built in a day, so don't expect to see it in one. The historic center alone could absorb a week: the Michelangelo-designed Campidoglio, the Pantheon, the Palatine Hill and the Roman Forum, as well as the nearby Colosseum and Baths of Caracalla. The basilicas take a little longer because they are spread throughout the city.

If it's Rome's views you're after, climb up into the dome of St. Peter's or admire the panorama from the top of the Spanish Steps (better yet, from the Pincio Gardens above it) at sunset. Or survey the Forum at night from the Capitoline. Bustling, beautiful Rome, sprawling among its seven hills, is fascinating for both its ancient and its modern wonders.

Of course, not everyone immediately loves Rome: Some dislike the city's untidiness and seeming disorganization. But give la citta eterna a chance to charm, or else risk missing something magnificent.

Self Guided Walk: Spanish Steps, Piazza Navona and Trevi Fountain

Spanish Steps to Trevi Fountain walk route:

This walk can be extended from the Trevi Fountain continuing west to the Pantheon and Piazza Navona on our Trevi Fountain to Piazza Navona via the Pantheon walk.

The length of this walk is about 1 km or well under a mile. If you walked it without stopping at a brisk pace it would be only around 15 minutes. However, this is the ancient centre of Rome, where every turn, nearly every building is of interest. The beauty of doing this walk independently is you take it at your own pace, some will take 30 minutes, some will take a day.

This walk is especially good in the evening, nearly the whole walk is lined with bars and small restaurants. Do get a good guide book and do pick up a detailed street map, many of the free street maps given out by hotels are adequate.

After a relaxing lunch, head on to explore more of ancient Rome.

Our private Colosseum tour vividly brings Ancient Rome to life as you embark on an unforgettable journey into the distant past, reconstructing the glory of the ancient world's greatest city through its imposing ruins.

"Enjoy the Flavors of Florence

Florence embodies the intellectual, artistic and cultural center of Tuscany... maybe even Italy. A visit to Tuscany could not be complete without a walk around Florence, photos from Piazzale Michelangelo, a stop at Ponte Vecchio and a stroll along the Arno River. A trip to Florence must include a visit to the Uffizi Museum, the Accademia and the imposing Palazzo della Signoria. To truly taste the flavor of Florence, one needs to enjoy a gelato in Piazza del Duomo, inhale the perfume of leather at the markets and eat a bistecca Fiorentina in the shade of Palazzo Pitti."

Day 5

Spend the day biking among the gorgeous rolling hills of Tuscany, some rural churches, local farmhouses, villas with operating farms, and medieval castles of noble Florentine families that at one time ruled a vast area of Tuscany and who transformed the landscape into what we still see today.

Traverse country roads with little traffic up hills and down through the valleys. We'll surmount hilltop villages, pedal through olive groves, pass by stone farmhouses, and roll through the vineyards and cypress tree lined little country roads.

Break for an authentic farm to table lunch enjoyed within one of the villas with operating farms.

Day 6

Uffizi Gallery Private Tour

Image credits: Pixabay

The Uffizi gallery was built in 1581, under the request of Granduca Francisco de' Medici, son of Cosimo I. The original design was that of Giorgio Vasari, one of the leading painters and architects during the 15th century. His plan for this museum was quite a strategically planned building as it was constructed adjacent to the Medici Palace and extended until the Arno river, over the Ponte Vecchio bridge. The space was originally intended for offices and to host bureaucratic meetings for various magistrates as apposed to holding masterpieces as it is today. It was built rapidly despite minor difficulties and major social events taking place in the area (ie: the marriage of Francisco and the Giovanna of Austria).

In 1584, the magnificent Octagonal Platform (or 'Tribuna Ottagonale') was built by Vasari's successor Buontalenti. This special cosmological structure consists of a weathercock which connects to an inside pointer alluding to the Air element. The sky vault and red upholstery allude to the Water and Fire elements respectively. There is an extraordinary octagonal table preserved since 1589 which sits in the middle of the room. In it knows them adjacent to this a time conserved scientific instruments, the Armory found place, and to the term of the first corridor Cabinet of the miniature- was the "Cabinet of the Madame" - today where the Granduchessa conserved its joys and small art objects. These as soon as described they were known them them museali more ancient and several in the content.

From the other side of the building they were found instead the laboratories of smaller limbs, the Foundry (or pharmacy), where medicines, scents were distilled and sometimes poisons, while to the term of the corridor, over the Loggia of the Lanzi it had been created a hanging garden. The extraordinary wealth that the Gallery had its origins since carried the enjoyment of the art, than in the city of Florence always it had been of public domain, to a private dimension, or at least to one much narrow one, and that was justified from the Doctors like one necessity dictated from the will of conservation of the works.

Meeting Point

Please talk with your hotel concierge to discuss the best options!

Halfway between the divine and the human, there is the Path of the Gods, where the sea is blue like the sky and the sky is blue like the Mediterranean sea. Its name refers to a magic reality beyond man's imagination. At that top, the view is indeed breathtaking.

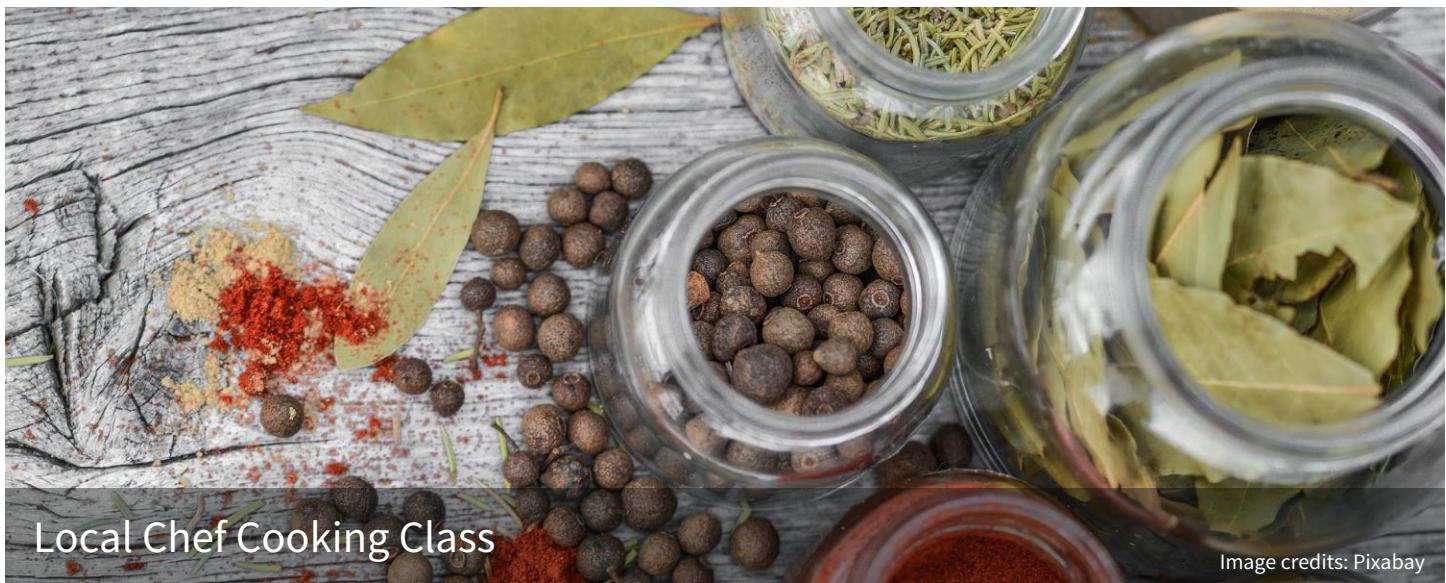

From the Path of the Gods, it is possible to admire the landscape stretching all the way from Praiano to Punta Campanella and from Li Galli Island to Capri

In a few minutes, you will arrive at the Biscuit Cave, a small open space where the trail begins. Here it is possible to admire old houses that were embedded into the rocky ground many years ago.

A natural water source refreshes the adventurers that arrive here after about 3 km of hiking. Along the way there is a fork in the hiking path, on the left, the path arrives at Praiano while on the right the path leads to Nocelle, a district of Positano.

You will turn right at that intersection. After 3 hours of walking, tourists will arrive at "Chiosco del Sentiero degli Dei", here on request it will be possible to taste some typical drinks and foods of the Amalfi Coast on a panoramic terrace. About 1680 steps will lead us downhill to Positano, a marvelous town on the coast with its typical and colored houses which give a magical atmosphere. From Positano, you will be able to return to Agerola by a local bus.

If you love hiking and enjoy nature you can't miss this adventure. Lush forests and flowers, splendid view and far-reaching horizon will be a perfect treat to your heart and your eyes.
