Paris Self Guided Things To Do For Families - BTA Guide

Image credits: Maria Benitez on Unsplash

Families visiting Paris will find plenty of activities to keep everyone entertained. One must-see destination is Montmartre, located in the 18th arrondissement. This hilltop village is well known for its basilica and cobbled streets lined with artists' galleries, cafes and bistros. Kids will love exploring the Sacré Coeur, which offers stunning views of Paris from its steps. This Roman Catholic church is a popular tourist destination due to its stunning architecture and scenery. The Sacré Coeur was built in 1876-1879, and is dedicated to the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

Another great spot is the medieval Marais district, with its narrow streets and quaint shops. The charming boutiques of the Marais district are full of Parisian fashion, while the nearby farmers' markets offer fresh produce and handmade items. For those looking for something special, the flea markets at St-Ouen offer antiques and one-of-a-kind pieces. No matter what your family is looking for, Paris has something to suit everyone's tastes!

The Luxembourg Gardens is another Paris favorite, with its green lawns, flower beds and chestnut trees. Kids can play on the merry-go-round while parents relax in nearby cafes or take a leisurely stroll around the grounds.

The Tuileries Gardens is another must-stop spot for families. There is a lot of space to run around, and there are plenty of activities for kids to enjoy. It is located between the Louvre and Place de la Concorde and is a particularly vibrant destination. Kids can explore the formal gardens, run through fountains and ride on the carousels. They can also enjoy live music performances during summer or visit the nearby toy store for some Parisian souvenirs.

The Left Bank of Paris is home to many iconic sites, such as Notre Dame Cathedral and the Latin Quarter. Sorbonne university and some of Paris' oldest bookshops are also located here. Check out the street performers along Rue de la Huchette or explore the surrounding bookshops and cafes. Families can also visit one of Paris' many parks for outdoor fun, like Parc des Buttes Chaumont or Jardin des Plantes.

Paris is an ideal destination for families visiting Europe. With its iconic monuments, gorgeous parks, quaint cafes and shops and a wide variety of activities, Paris offers something for everyone. From exploring Montmartre or the Luxembourg Gardens to shopping in the Marais, we hope you enjoy your day of leisure.

Raviolis Chinois Nord-Est $

<https://civiale.raviolinordest.com>
115 rue Saint-Denis
Paris, Île-de-France
(+33) 9 81 17 19 08

The small dining room may have bare-bones decor, but you're here for the homemade jiaozi (small Beijing-style dumplings), which are probably the best meal you'll find in Paris for a fiver. Served grilled or boiled in orders of 10, they're stuffed with your choice of pork and green cabbage; mushrooms, beef, and celery; egg, chives, and shrimp; or tofu, mushrooms, and green cabbage. Ze Kitchen Galerie $$$

<https://zekitchengalerie.fr/en/>
4 Rue des Grands Augustins, 75006 Paris,
+33 1 44 32 00 32

This is the talented Chef William Ledeuil's Left Bank restaurant and a place where you will enjoy French-Asian fusion cuisine. The restaurant's ambiance is that of an art gallery (hence the name) where collector-worthy paintings are displayed and rotated every 6 months. Chef Ledeuil is the author of two recent food books, one about bullion, a book that helped touch off the bullion craze that swept NYC a few years back as well as Paris, and another more recent book about pasta in all its expressions. Dining here at this 1 Michelin-star restaurant is just as romantic an experience for lunch as it is for dinner since the location has you in the heart of one of Paris's most charming art gallery districts. And there is nothing more romantic than a long, lingering lunch enjoyed with a glass of wine (or two) followed by leisurely sauntering through the small Saint-Germain-des-Pres streets where one art gallery is followed by another. Food and culture and romance - Paris is at the very heart of this intersection.

+33 1 42 61 50 21

Creatively interpreted French classics & a renowned apple tart in a stylish, understated setting

This 1686 café-restaurant is the oldest in Paris and both Napoleon Bonaparte and Benjamin Franklin were regulars here. It was also a meeting point for Charles Montesquieu, Voltaire and Jean-Jacques Rousseau. The place appears almost untouched, with various historical artefacts on display, including Napoleon's bicorne hat. The menu is old-school French; the braised beef cheek is tender and flavourful, but the coq au vin is the real standout, and is one of the best you'll find in Paris. Save room for the Café Liegeois Procope, a delightful melange of white-coffee ice cream, coffee jelly, coffee panna cotta and whipped cream.

St. Germaine Restaurant Recommendations

Le Comptoir, Carrefour de l'Odéon. $$$ Bistro, Restaurant, French, European

9 Carr de l'Odéon, 75006 Paris, France

Fans of Anthony Bourdain will be familiar with this standing-only tapas bar on Carrefour de l'Odéon. Yves Camdeborde's tapas bar is incredibly popular, and for good reason: decent prices and a good selection of wine make this bar appropriate for all tastes and budgets. Just next door is l'Avant Comptoir de la Mer, which has the same premise but features a decent selection of fresh seafood, and not far away is l'Avant Comptoir du Marché, where the entire menu is dedicated to the pig.

Yoshinori

Restaurant, Japanese, French
<https://www.yoshinori-paris.com/en/>
18 rue Gregoire de tours, 75006 Paris
telephone; 09 84 19 76 05

Chef and owner Yoshinori Morié has designed a menu that pays tribute to French culinary culture, with his own touches of his native Japan dotted throughout. It's not cheap, but if you're into fine dining, it's certainly not the most expensive option in Paris, either. Yoshinori's most well-known dish is his foie gras de canard confit with smoked eel, figs and citron noir (dried limes popular in Middle Eastern cooking). The only problem is, the dishes are so well plated and presented that you won't want to eat them.

Marcello Restaurant, Italian, $$$

<https://www.marcello-paris.com/en/>

Phone +01 43 26 52 26

8, rue Mabillon, 75006 Paris

Italian cravings are well satisfied by the team at Marcello, a St-Germain hotspot. Open for every meal of the day lunch, brunch, afternoon tea, drinks and dinner Marcello's menu is simple and the food is home-made. The inner courtyard is sunken below street level, with a romantic fountain and climbing plants that take you away from the hustle and bustle of the city. You may think you're in some far-away Italian countryside! Try their vongole (spaghetti with clams) or bianco (tortellini with truffle cream, chives and lemon). The best thing about this place? The pasta, which is made fresh in-house every day.

Quinsou $$ Restaurant, French

<https://www.quinsourestaurant.fr/en/>

33 RUE DE L'ABBE GREGROIRE

75006 PARIS

Quinsou is the kind of place where cooking teachers and professional chefs come for a quality meal. Each day, head chef Antoine Bonnet writes his menu based on whatever produce he finds at the market that morning, something that is both wonderful and frustrating. There's no such thing as a bad meal at Quinsou, and when you hear of a particularly intriguing dish (there were rumours of a pigeon en cocotte with smoked celeriac, radicchio and anchoïade), it's unlikely you'll get the chance to try it yourself. At least the Normandy oysters seem to be a menu staple, served with Japanese dashi and a splash of yuzu.

The Cod House Restaurant, Japanese, $$$

<http://www.thecodhouse.fr/en>

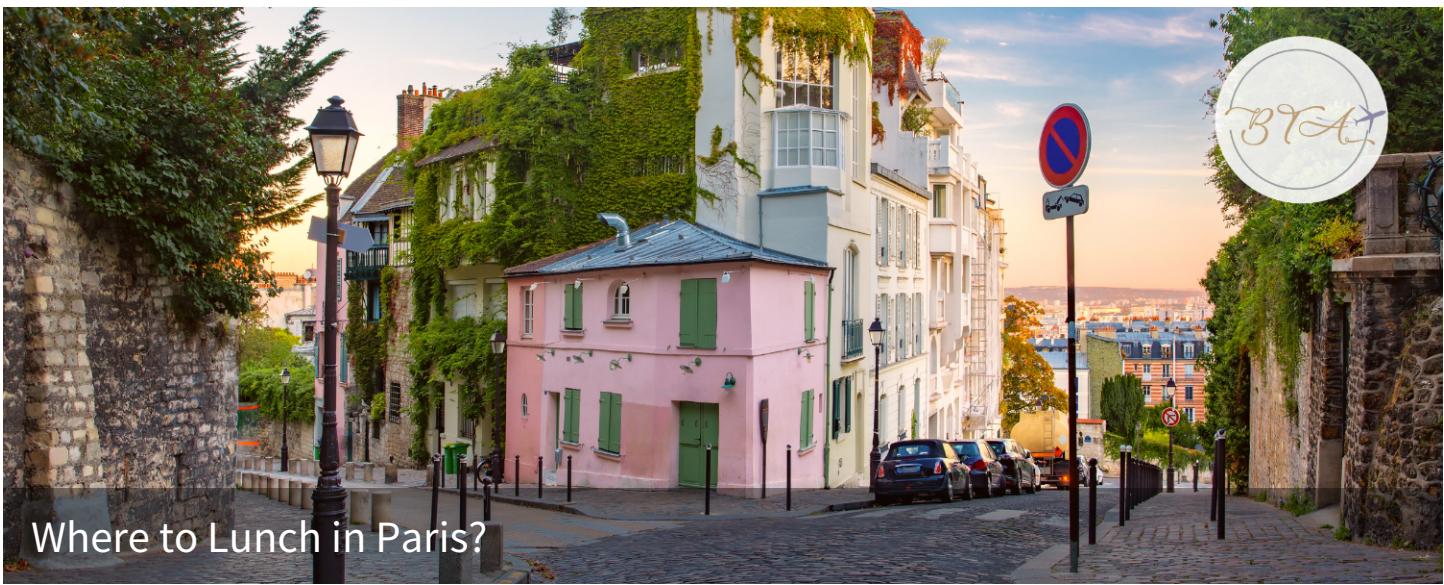

1 RUE DE CONDÉ, 75006 PARIS TÉL :

It's not always easy to find a restaurant that is open seven days a week in Paris, or a Japanese-style izakaya, but in The Cod House, we've found our Monday-night unicorn. One of several restaurants run by gastronomic powerhouse Black Code, here you'll find a melange of Japanese and European flavours sometimes all in one dish. Particularly well known, mostly on Instagram, is the Kimm's cocktail: Pimm's with red fruits and cucumber and an earl grey syrup. You really can't go wrong with the menu, which includes both hot and cold dishes, but be sure to try the avocado with Japanese vinaigrette, the tarama à la truffe and the vegetarian bao with yuzu sauce.

Epoca, $$ 17 Rue Oudinot, 75007 Paris, France

<https://www.epoca.paris/en/>

Stepping into Epoca for the first time, you're struck by the warm and casual Art Deco vibe. Though the focus is on good Italian food, it's not the stereotypical Italian fare that you come to expect, but proper regional delights that are hard to find outside of the peninsula. The carciofi alla giudia (Roman-style fried artichoke) is probably the best-known item on the menu, an incredibly striking dish that is worth ordering just to see it; the pizza fritta in panzerotto (fried pizza, Neapolitan-style) is also a favourite. And they're just the snacks! Epoca also serves a fresh and flavourful polpo mare e monti (grilled octopus with pumpkin cream) and a delicious spaghettoni cacio e pepe (spaghettoni with sheep's cheese and pepper).
