Arches National Park Self Guided

Image credits: Pixabay

Located just 5 miles (8 km) north of Moab is Arches National Park, which contains the world's largest concentration of natural sandstone arches. Although over 2,000 arches are located within the park's 76,518 acres, the park also contains an astounding variety of other geological formations. Colossal sandstone fins, massive balanced rocks, soaring pinnacles and spires dwarf visitors as they explore the park's viewpoints and hiking trails.

A paved scenic drive takes visitors to many of the major viewpoints within the park. The park's rock formations delight children as well as adults, with many easy trails providing opportunities for kids to get out of the car and explore the arches up close.

Hikers can choose from a wide variety of trails, from short twenty minute walks leading right up to many of the largest arches in the park, to more adventurous hikes into lesser seen areas. Check out these great hikes for inspiration.

After your horseback ride, you'll return to the corral, bid farewell to your steed and take some time to explore and relax around the ranch and head back to downtown Moab, Utah. The afternoon ride is one hour shorter than the Morning Ride, so you can expect less time exploring down this scenic trail.

Dinosaur Remains Self Guided

Paleontologists have found a treasure trove of dinosaur remains in the rock formations of the Moab area. The record of dinosaurs and other ancient animals in the Moab area is one of the best in the country.

Rocks deposited during the Mesozoic Era are well exposed in the Moab area. That period of time spans approximately 252 million years to 66 million years ago. The Mesozoic Era has three divisions: Triassic, Jurassic and Cretaceous. Dinosaurs appear in our area toward the end of the Triassic. Southeastern Utah has a prolific fossil record of bones, and especially tracks, that has been exposed in the sedimentary record of Mesozoic age all around Moab. Dinosaurs, including birds, are reptiles belonging to the Archosauria ("ruling reptiles"). Pterosaurs ("winged lizards") and crocodilians are also included in the Archosauria.

Day 5

Canyonlands Self Guided Sunset

Image credits: Pixabay

Canyonlands National Park preserves 337,598 acres of colorful canyons, mesas, buttes, fins, arches, and spires in the heart of southeast Utah's high desert. Water and gravity have been the prime architects of this land, sculpting layers of rock into the rugged landscape you see today.

Canyonlands preserves the natural beauty and human history throughout its four districts, which are divided by the Green and Colorado rivers. While the districts share a primitive desert atmosphere, each retains its own character and offers different opportunities for exploration and adventure.

Though they appear close on a map, there are no roads that directly link the districts. Traveling between them requires two to six hours by car as there are few places to cross the rivers. Get directions. Most people find it impractical to visit more than one area in a single trip.

Phased reopening - some locations still closed due to COVID-19

We are increasing access to the park in a phased approach. Canyonlands National Park roads, trails, park stores, restrooms, and campgrounds are open. Visitor centers remain closed. Entrance fees are being collected.

Island in the Sky is the most accessible district, offering expansive views from many overlooks along the paved scenic drive, several hikes of varying length and a moderate four-wheel-drive route called the White Rim Road.

The Needles offers more of a backcountry experience, requiring some hiking or four-wheel driving to see the area's attractions.

The Maze is a remote district requiring considerably more time and self-reliance to visit. The Orange Cliffs Unit on the western boundary is co-administered by Glen Canyon National Recreation Area.

Horseshoe Canyon Unit Northwest of The Maze, is a day-use area with stunning American Indian rock art panels.

The Rivers Flatwater trips on the Green or Colorado rivers and whitewater trips in Cataract Canyon are unique ways to experience the park that usually involve two or more days of boating.
